Documentary that wants to recover the memory of the adventurous women and explorers in such a special area as the Pyrenees. In the 19th century, Pyreneism was considered an intellectual approach to the mountain. To be a Pyrenean you had to ascend, feel and write.

Women who already in 1800 broke stereotypes but did not have the relevance they deserved. Their stories were banned from the press at the time because they were considered bad examples for other women and should not be considered as benchmarks. Recover some stories that were somehow ahead of their time because they happened in an environment and an era not very propitious for women.

Stories of women who sought a life different from what was expected of them, left their homes, against the stereotype that relegated them to the care of their homes, to travel the world and enter the adventures of climbing summits or discovering caves.
