After a call to 911 to save her addict mother, Claire, 9 years old, is taken by social services. She quickly ends up with the only relative she has left: her grand-mother Pauline. Overnight, she finds herself living in a seniors' residence. She slowly develops a special relationship with her grandma despite the many obstacles, and becomes friends with a few elders. Thanks to her great imagination and her ability to make others laugh, Claire makes her way through the residence. She hangs on to the affection and stability older people can offer her but the situation is only temporary...
